Headline:
Sunny but cold. The odd coastal wintry shower.

Today:
Most of the country will have a dry day with some long spells of sunshine, with just a few wintry showers around northern and eastern coasts. Frost early and late, persisting over snowcover in north. Mostly light winds, Shetland breezy.

Tonight:
The mainland and the Western Isles will be dry clear and frosty, with very severe frost likely over snow-covered parts of the north. Wintry showers Northern Isles, moderate snowfalls Shetland.

Sunday:
Further snow showers over Shetland could give moderate falls. A few wintry showers over northern coasts but most again dry sunny and very cold.

Outlook for Monday to Wednesday:
Clear or sunny spells and a few wintry showers on Monday. Rain sleet and snow in south and east on Tuesday and Wednesday with heavy falls possible.
